ABSTRACT

Drawing primarily from a survey conducted by the American Association of Community and Junior Colleges in fall 1987, this report provides a statistical portrait of the country's community, junior, and technical colleges on a state-by-state and institution-by-institution basis. Part 1 presents data for individual colleges listed by state. For each college, it provides the following information: the name, city, and zip code of the institution; the name of the chief executive officer; type of control (i.e., public or private); fall 1986 and 1987 headcount enrollment in credit classes of full-time, part-time, and minority students; noncredit enrollment for 1986-87; number of full- and part-time faculty teaching credit classes in fall 1987; number of administrators employed in fall 1987; and annual tuition and required fees for the 1987-88 academic year. Part 2 presents statewide data on both public and private two-year colleges. The state summaries include the number of colleges; fall 1986 and 1987 full- and part-time and total headcount enrollment in credit classes; fall 1987 minority enrollment in public institutions; and the numbers of faculty employed full- and part-time in fall 1987. PREFACE

Numbers clearly tell much of the exhiloratory story of community, technical, and junior college achievement. Despite projected enrollment declines, the number of students taking college credit classes at community colleges has increased steadily over the past two academic years, climbing from 4.60 million students in Fall 1985 to 5.06 million students in Fall 1987. Early projections indicate that the Fall 1988 enrollment will increase by four to five percent and reach an estimated 5.3 million students. Community, technical, and junior colleges now enroll 53 percent of all entering college freshmen. These institutions are particularly important gateways to higher education for traditionally underserved populations, including minorities and working adults. Almost half (47 percent) of all minority students in higher education are enrolled at a community college. In addition, most community college students (67 percent) are working students and enrolled on a part-time basis, compared to slightly less than 30 percent of the students at four-year institutions.

Drawing primarily from AACJC's Fall 1987 survey, this 1987–88 yearbook provides a statistical portrait of the colleges on a state-by-state and institution-by-institution basis. Designed as a ready reference source of pertinent data, this is the third and final volume in a set of three information resources published by AACJC in 1988. The first volume, the 1988 AACJC Membership Directory, provides a state-by-state listing of AACJC member colleges, detailing each college's address and phone number, the name of the chief executive officer, and other information such as the year the college was founded and its accreditation status. The second volume, AACJC's Guide to Community, Technical, and Junior Colleges, is a detailed listing of all regionally-accredited institutions, regardless of AACJC membership status. Besides basic directory information such as address and phone number, the Guide provides the names of key administrators at each institution.

This information resource series is an important part of AACJC's effort to promote public understanding, recognition, and support for community, technical, and junior colleges. We are grateful to college personnel nationwide who have made this series possible by cooperating with AACJC in gathering the requisite data and information.

President and Chief Executive Officer

INTRODUCTION

Community, technical, and junior colleges constitute a large and diverse segment of American higher education. Approximately 1,200 of these institutions are regionally accredited, and their enrollments range from 56 students at White Pines College in New Hampshire to 330,872 students at the Community College of the Air Force. In total, these colleges enroll over five million students in credit classes, approximately 40 percent of all undergraduate students in the United States.

This Yearbook, AACJC's sixtieth annual statistical report, summarizes selected findings from the Association's 1987 survey of these diverse institutions. Included are data on Fall 1987 headcount enrollment, the number of minority students enrolled, the number of faculty and professional staff employed, and tuition and fee charges. Besides college-by-college data summaries, the Yearbook also details selected state and national statistics.

Data on Individual Colleges

Part one of the Yearbook presents data for individual colleges, which are listed by state. Individual institutions are listed alphabetically, with the exception of colleges within multicollege districts or campuses within multicampus colleges. For example, in the Illinois section, Wilbur Wright College is listed after the heading for the City Colleges of Chicago. Similarly, West Los Angeles College is found among the L's in California under the heading for the Los Angeles Community College District. In this way, data for districts and multicampus colleges are not scattered throughout the listings.

For each college, the Yearbook provides the following information:

- Name of the institution
- City and zip code
- Name of the chief executive officer
- Type of control (public or private)
- Fall 1987 headcount enrollment in credit classes (full-time, part-time, and minority)
- Fall 1986 headcount enrollment in credit classes (full-time, part-time, minority)
- Noncredit enrollment for academic year 1986–87
- Number of faculty teaching credit classes in Fall 1987 (part-time, full-time, total)
- Number of professional staff employed in Fall 1987
- Number of administrators employed in Fall 1987
- Annual tuition and required fees for academic year 1987–88

Few surveys yield a 100 percent response rate on all items, and blank spaces indicate areas in which individual colleges provided no data. For example, if College XYZ provided data for the total number of faculty but not for the number of full-time or part-time faculty, spaces for the latter are left blank. Also, blanks often appear under entries for multicampus colleges. In cases where aggregate data for the entire college were provided without breakdowns for individual campuses, data entries for the separate campuses are left blank. (For an example, see the entry for Northern Virginia Community College.) In other cases, data for the individual campuses are provided, but aggregate statistics are not. (See, for example, the entry for Miami-Dade Community College.)

State Data

Part Two presents state-by-state summaries of selected data for both public and private institutions. Included for each state are:

- The number of colleges
- Fall 1987 headcount enrollment in credit classes (full-time, part-time, and total)
- Fall 1987 minority enrollment in public institutions (responses from private institutions on the number of minority students enrolled were too low to draw a reliable estimate)
- The number of faculty employed in Fall 1987 (full-time, part-time, total)

Because 100 percent response rates were received only on the items of total credit enrollment and the total number of faculty employed, state data on full-time and part-time students, full-time and part-time faculty, and the number of minority students enrolled are estimates. For example, all 41 of Alabama's public community colleges provided data on the total number of students enrolled in Fall 1987, but only 38 provided data on the number of minority students who were enrolled. At those 38 colleges, minorities made up 18.2 percent of all students. To estimate the number of minority students enrolled statewide in public community colleges, total enrollment at all 41 institutions (57,158) was multiplied by .182, yielding an estimated minority enrollment figure of 10,406.

National Data

The Yearbook's appendix,published as a separate addendum,draws upon data collected by AACJC, as well as government and other reports published in 1987–88, to present a brief statistical portrait of community, technical, and junior colleges nationwide. Included are trend data on enrollment, student characteristics, financial aid, faculty, administrators, finance, and associate degree conferrals.
